Marieke de Bode (1992) studied Architecture and Urbanism at the Technical University in Delft. During the minor Social Geography at the University of Amsterdam, she developed an interest in combining spatial with social complex metropolitan issues.

During her graduation project, she has explored the processes of gentrification and displacement in deprived neighbourhoods in London. She has developed a strategy which gives community members more influence and power in local urban development. This strategy ensures that the interests and opinions of the different population groups in London are better taken into account.

Marieke is visually very strong. Translating complex issues into clear and comprehensive information and visualisations is a characteristic that is clearly visible in all her projects. She is able to provide clear concepts for different actors and is therefore able to connect these various actors.

Besides the ability to think visually and conceptually, Marieke has lots of creativity, responsibility and enthusiasm and is driven to quickly master various complex projects.

With these skills, she has been strengthening BLOC's team since March 2020 as a concept developer.
