Jesse Ligtenberg (1995) got his bachelor's degree in Communication and Information Sciences at Tilburg University with a specialization in BDM: Business Communication and Digital Media. He then received his master's degree in Communication Sciences: Media Studies at the University of Antwerp and completed it with Grand Distinction. This master specializes in the transition of the media landscape: What is the relationship between new and traditional media? What will the media landscape look like in 50 years? How do different media reinforce - and compete with - each other?

Jesse has a passion for the Dutch language and a great love for the constantly changing media landscape. His broad interests enable him to immerse himself well in new information and quickly get to the core of the topic. He likes to involve others in his enthusiasm and optimism but is also sharp and critical.
